MAYOR OF LONDON

“London’s tech sector is the envy of cities around the world. It makes a massive contribution to our economy and plays a crucial role in London’s international reputation as a hub for innovation. I’m proud to launch my TechInvest events, in partnership with the UKBAA, and to lead by example in supporting this thriving sector. These events will showcase the fantastic creativity of these companies and will enable the city’s tech entrepreneurs to connect with leading investors. I’m confident that by helping them access much-needed investment they can realise their potential to grow and develop.”

SADIQ KHAN

WELCOME

On behalf of UK Business Angels Association, the trade body for angel and early stage investing, we are delighted to be partnering with the Mayor of London to present this 6th TechInvest event and our first of the 2019 series. I should like to begin by expressing our great appreciation to the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, for his vision in instigating this exciting four-year initiative and also to the GLA for their most valuable support for these showcase events. We are also very pleased to be holding our event in this stunning building, housing the Royal College of Physicians and a fitting setting where science and human endeavour are celebrated.

As we all know, healthcare is a major challenge for us all and it is vital that we can increase the efficiency and effectiveness for London's communities. We are also increasingly aware that an important means to address these challenges is now offered through the convergence of medicine and health care with new deep technologies. So we are especially pleased to be bringing to our investors this evening, the opportunity to see such an exciting group of entrepreneurs, based here in London and who are bringing new data driven and digitally enabled approaches across a range of healthcare areas covering such areas as prediction, prevention, diagnosis, treatment and care.

The entrepreneurs presenting to you this evening have been selected from over 120 applications received from businesses across London. I should especially like to thank our panel of eminent judges drawn from investment and healthcare: Dr Tony Young, Pam Garside, Carina Namih, Hitesh Thakrar and James Somauroo, for giving their time and expertise to review and choose the presenting businesses. I should like to congratulate those who made it through to the showcase this evening and to express my thanks to all the entrepreneurs for participating in the competition.

We are very pleased to have Naleem Patel, COO of MedCity, join us this evening to provide some insights on the important role of MedCity here in the Capital. We have been delighted to collaborate with MedCity for this event and to highlight its role in working to promote and grow the life science sector, supporting research, commercialisation, entrepreneurship and investment for the industry across London and the South East. We are also delighted to have as our guest speaker, Carina Namih, Investment partner at Episode 1 and successful tech entrepreneur. Having worked extensively in investment and start-ups in UK and Silicon Valley, Carina also co-founded HelixNano, focusing on the intersection between deep tech and biomedicine and backed by Johnson & Johnson.

We hope you enjoy the presentations and that, as a result of this evening's interactions, several of these London health tech innovators will attract the investment they seek to further grow and scale their businesses.
